NEW CHANCELLOR
GREAT STATESMAN

At Least Friends Say So and People Are Hoping for Best.

[Special Cable to The Times-Dispatch.] BERLIN, July 17.—The new chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, is so little known personally, even in Germany, that the domestic and foreign attempts to estimate the probable tendency of his regime are quite vague and indefinite. It does not follow that he will fall to show qualities of greatness and independence, although most of the critics desorbe him as "an Emperor's man." His lack of personal prominence, despite the high posts he has filled with great ability, is to his credit. Those who know him best describe him as not only a man of tremendous working capacity, but as a broad-minded statesman of the first rank.

Germany hopes this estimate of him is true, for otherwise he will inevitably be dominated by his imperial master. The German people, much as they respect their sovereign, would deeply regret this.
